

A Rant on Atheism in Counselling: Removing the God Goggles

This book is designed to be a rant on the subject and will offend and annoy the religious. Questions such as: Can a true believer in God have credibility as a counsellor? How does a belief in God influence the process of counselling? Does the acceptance of some religious teachings disqualify an individual from being a counsellor? Can a counsellor still value a client if they believe they are worthy of death in Armageddon? The book is generally critical of any belief that is dogmatic in its nature and not open to change. The value of the science of Psychology is discussed as the creator of counselling. Science is also presented as a way of thinking for the effective counsellor. Objectivity and the value of remaining in the clients frame of reference is discussed and how a belief in the teachings of a holy book can sabotage this skill. The author also discusses his own search for meaning in life and describes how he became a counsellor and an atheist after flirting with spirituality and dogmatic religion. A book that is designed to challenge the student counsellor to seriously question the value of their beliefs.
