

The Works of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow: With Bibliographical and Critical Notes and His Life, With Extracts from His Journals and Correspondence, Vol. 9 (Classic Reprint)

Mr. Longfellow made his first visit to Europe in 1826-1829, to qualify himself to teach modern languages and literature in Bowdoin College, he spent a year in Italy. He carried with him some rudimentary knowledge of the Italian language, for after he had been in the country about three weeks, he wrote to his father that he found Italian very easy to read and not difficult to understand when spoken. He reached Italy at Christmas, and in describing his life in Rome in the midsummer following, he says in Outre Mer: At midnight, when the crowd is gone, I retire to my chamber, and, poring over the gloomy pages of Dante, or Bandello's slaughtering tale, protract my nightly vigil till the morning star is in the sky. At the end of the year he could say: With regard to my proficiency in the Italian, I have only to say that all at the hotel where I lodge took me for an Italian until I told them I was an American.
