Sup.) Wednesday, September 26, 1827 Goethe had invited me to take a drive this morning to the Hottelstedt Ecke, the most western summit of the Ettersberg, and thence to the Ettersburg hunting lodge. The day was very fine, and we drove early out of the Jacob sgate. Behind Liitzendorf, where the journey was up-hill, and we could only drive leisurely, we had an opportunity for various observations. Goethe observed in the hedges a number of birds, and asked me if they were larks. Thou great and beloved one, thought I, though thou hast investigated nature as few others have, in ornithology thou appearest a mere child. These are yellow-hammers and sparrows, returned I, and some late gras-mucken which, after moulting, come from the thicket of the Ettersberg down to the gardens and fields, and prepare for their migration ;but there are no larks. It is not in the nature of larks to settle upon bushes. The field or sky-larks, rise upwards into the air, and dart down again to the earth; they also, in the autumn, fly through the air in flocks, and settle themselves some A kind of small singing bird.
