

The Journal of the Rev. John Wesley, Vol. 3 of 4 (Classic Reprint)

Thur. 8. We rode over the mountains to Ballymena, and had just passed through the town, when a man came running out of the field, called me by my name, and pressed me much to preach there; but I could not stay, having appointed one to meet me at Portlo-nane, which he accordingly did, and brought me to Mr. Burrows, near Garvah. Fri. 9. A little rest was acceptable. Sat. 10. I preached, morning and evening, in Mr. Bs house, to a well behaved congregation, though of various denominations, Churchmen, Papists, Presbyterians, Cameronians. One Seceder, likewise ventured in; but the moment he heard, Our Father, which art in heaven, he ran away with all speed. Sun. 11. We had such a congregation in the church, as, perhaps, had not been there in this century; and I believe God reached some of their hearts. Several were in tears. I spoke extremely plain; especially to those who were full of their own wisdom and righteousness. Mon. 12. Returning through Ballymena, I preached in the Market-house to a large concourse of people ;and God was there of a truth. I have found no such spirit in any congregation since I left Dublin. Thence I rode to Moira, and preached to a very civil congregation; but there is no life in them !T ues. 13. My I rish horse was thoroughly tired. However, with much difficulty, partly riding, and partly walking, about eight in the evening I reached Coot-H ill. I preached in the house now, and at five in the morning; but at eleven in the Market-house, where I delivered my own soul to most of the Protestants in the town. Having procured a fresh horse, I rode on to Belturbet, a town in which there is neither Papist nor Presbyterian; but to supply that defect, there are Sabbath-breakers, drunkards, and common swearers in abundance. Thur. 15. We rode through a delightful country to Swadlingbar, famed for its mineral waters. Soon after, my new horse began t(Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the book.)
