

Mrs. Featherweights Musical Moments (Classic Reprint)

Mrs. Featherweight s Musical Moments GEORGE says, complained Mrs. Featherweight to her caller, that I look like a mountain peak covered with snow in my white gown. Do you think it makes me look a larger? I am so glad to hear you say so, dearie. Men are such brutes. I am sure after marrying three times I ought to know. My dear, they are like peas in a pod, some big, some little, but only peas after all. You know I abhor being conspicuous and always make a point of dressing simply. Just because I wore some few pieces of jewelry to the opera the other night, George said I looked like a jewellers show-case with all that junk on. Yes, he called it junk. I tried to explain that I consider it a duty one does the artists to look a little bit festive, but you might as well save your breath. Men have no conception of the proprieties as we understand them. I just told him then and there, that if I waited until he asked me to go anywhere, but to one of his old vaudeville shows, I would be dead and in my grave. He hasnt a spark of sympathy, and laughed in the most hateful way. You cant drag him to the opera and he always sleeps through a concert. And would you believe it, dearie, before we were married he pretended to like Wagner. He calls Fido Siegfried because he says he yelps just like a german tenor. You may laugh, dearie, but I think it is perfectly disgusting to talk so. My dear, take my advice and never let a man suspect that you think he is funny or your life will be a burden. What I have suffered with my sensitive nature nobody will ever know. I suppose it is because of my musical temperament. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and don't occur in the book.)
